TOWN COUNCIL.

Council Chamber,
February, 16th, 1914.

Council met in regular session on Monday evening, Mayor Alexander in the chair.

Present—Reeve Denison and Councilors Walters, Wiseman, Waller, Carson and Dickinson.

The minutes of the last regular session were read and confirmed.

A communication was read from Roemac Roads Limited, Toronto, asking that the council fix a date when their representative could meet the council and discuss the merits of Roemac as a road builder.

Coun. Carson explained that this process of road building had been discussed and investigated by last year's Street Committee and the conclusion they had arrived at was that until such time as it would not be necessary to be continually digging up the street for gas, water and sewer connections, anything in the way of permanent streets should not be considered.

The communication was ordered filed.

A communication was read from W. W. Sands, Secretary of the Canadian Peace Centenary Association, Kingston, relating to the holding of a celebration in that city in the year 1915. Kingston city and district has been chosen as a centre for the holding of a demonstration commemorating one hundred years of peace, and Mayor Alexander of Napanee has been appointed a member of the committee. A committee meeting will be held in the city of Kingston on Monday, February 23rd, at 10.30 a.m.

Laid on table until order of motions.

A communication was read from Deebul Tools, Limited, Montreal, acknowledging receipt of letter stating the concessions the town would be willing to give them for locating their factory here. They would answer the same in due course.

Ordered filed.

A communication was read from H. Babcock asking to be appointed caretaker of the disposal works at a salary of $15 per month. He to have the use of lands in connection with said works.

Laid on table until later in the evening.

Coun. Carson, chairman of Finance Committee, reported that at a meeting of the Finance Committee to examine the auditors' report some slight errors had been found and the report was handed back to the auditors for correction. The auditors had made the corrections and handed the report back to the committee.

Report adopted.

Coun. Walters, chairman of the Town Property Committee, reported that Mr. Geo. Lewis had resigned the position of caretaker of the Disposal Works, and since the last meeting of council Mr. John Kellar had been working with Mr. Lewis learning how to look after the plant, and the committee recommending the passing of a by-law appointing Mr. Kellar as caretaker.

Report adopted.

TARIFF REFORM BEATEN

Liberals Outvote Unionists in Britain by 74.

Amendment to Address In Reply to Speech From Throne Favoring Ad Valorem Duty Up to 10 Per Cent. on Foreign Manufactures In Order to Give Imperial Preference—Government Sees Disruption.

LONDON, Feb. 17.—The tariff reform amendment to the address was defeated in the House of Commons yesterday by a majority of 74. Capt. Tryon advocated imperial preference so far as practicable without imposing fresh duties on imported foodstuffs, and by admitting colonial imports at a lower rate than foreign imports. He would impose an ad valorem duty up to ten per cent. on foreign manufactures.

On behalf of the Government the Solicitor-General, Sir Stanley Burrell, said the policy of imperial preference was one that could not exist. If the Opposition desired colonial preference they must tax food. Did the Opposition intend to include raw material? He denied that such a preference would tend to bind the colonies to the Mother Country. It was likely to carry with it seeds that would lead to results which many would be unwilling to contemplate. If they desired to accomplish imperial preference they must put a tax on food and also put a tax on raw material. He denied that it was impossible to give effective preference to the colonies.

"Canada," he said, "is rapidly becoming an industrial country. There costs of production are not much lower in many industries than ours to-day. I think it quite possible that if this system of preference were once adopted we would gradually find, probably in the lifetime of most of us, a position in which the Canadian manufacturers would be willing to content themselves with protection, which is a natural one, owing to the cost of carriage, and when we might have complete free trade between Canada and the United Kingdom. That is the ideal everyone will consider worth striving for. Those who are the best judges in the colonies think there is something in it. We will give them precisely what they ask for and we will give them everything that they have asked for when we get the power."

LITERACY NO TEST.

President Wilson Certain To Veto Immigration Bill.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 17.—President Wilson will veto the Burnett immigration bill if it comes to him for signature with the so-called literacy test contained in it.

This became known from an authoritative quarter last night after Chairman Smith of the Senate Immigration Committee had announced that the bill, virtually as it passed the House, including the literacy test, would be favorably reported to the Senate soon. Prospects are that the bill will pass the Senate as reported from the committee, but the measure never will become law, according to close friends of the President. The President does not consider literacy a test of character and believes some other means should be devised to prevent undesirable aliens from entering the country.

DIVORCE LAW UNEQUAL

Poor Should Have Fair Chance With Rich, Says Northrup.

Member For East Hastings Raises Question of Divorce in Commons and After Discussion Premier Borden Moves Adjournment With Suggestion That Conference Be Held—Catholic Members Opposed

OTTAWA, Feb. 17.—A resolution calling for reform in Canadian divorce procedure, so as to give the poor people a better chance, was presented to the House of Commons last evening by W. B. Northrup, the Conservative member for East Hastings.

Mr. Northrup, in opening, said that Canada and Ireland were the only civilized countries in the world which granted divorces by act of Parliament. It had once been the practice in England to grant divorces in that way. But nearly 70 years ago divorce courts had been established and their procedure would be greatly cheapened and simplified as a result of the report of the royal commission of 1910. He did not advocate increasing the grounds for divorce or maintain that divorces should be granted at all, but there should either be no divorces or there should be divorces for rich and poor alike. As it was only people of considerable means could obtain a divorce in Quebec, Ontario, Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta. In the other four provinces there were divorce courts.

"When a poor man comes to me and says that his wife has abandoned him and her children, and is living with another man in Watertown or Oswego, I can only advise him to get rich. The poor cannot get divorces in Canada."

Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux said that as a Roman Catholic he was opposed to all divorce legislation. The deplorable condition of affairs in the United States should serve as a warning to Canada. In France the low birth rate was in part attributable to the divorce law of 1884, and there was a strong agitation for its modification or repeal.

F. B. Carvell (Carlton, N.B.) supported Mr. Northrup's motion.

Judge Doherty, Minister of Justice, reminded the House that the law of Canada did not recognize divorce at all. It was beside the question to talk of reforming our divorce procedure, or of conferring jurisdiction upon the judges. How could the judge grant divorces, unless Parliament first passed a law establishing the right to a divorce upon certain conditions therein prescribed? There was no inequality in the present system, because no woman in the country could obtain a divorce.

SARNIA, Feb. 17.—The mammoth coal hoist at Point Edward Grand Trunk dock, the property of the Northern Navigation Co., caught fire about noon yesterday and was almost totally destroyed, entailing a loss to the company of something like $40,000. The fire originated in the boiler house and quickly spread until the entire structure was a mass of flames. From the coal house it was carried to a large pile of coal, and this is still burning. The Grand Trunk fire engine and two tugs of the Reid Wrecking Co. were called and did good work. The Sarnia fire department did much to prevent the spread of the fire to the large freight sheds of the Grand Trunk, which adjoin the burned coal hoist.

British M. P. Penalized.

LONDON, Feb. 17.—Sir Stuart Montagu Samuel, Radical member of Parliament for Whitechapel, was yesterday ordered by Justice Sir Sydney Rowlatt of the King's Bench Division to pay penalties and costs amounting to $65,000, because he voted in the House of Commons while his firm had a contract with the British Government. The money had to be paid to Dr. William Bird as a common informer.

Hog Cholera Epidemic Spreads.

LONDON, Feb. 17.—The hog cholera situation in Middlesex County is assuming more serious proportions, and daily the Government inspectors are condemning a large number of the animals. The first outbreak was discovered a week ago, and has spread rapidly. It is thought that the feeding to the animals of restaurant refuse may have brought on the epidemic.

Canada did not recognize divorce at all. It was beside the question to talk of reforming our divorce procedure, or of conferring jurisdiction upon the judges. How could the judge grant divorces, unless Parliament first passed a law establishing the right to a divorce upon certain conditions therein prescribed? There was no inequality in the present system, because no person in the provinces of Quebec, Ontario, Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta had any legal right whatever to obtain a divorce. True, Parliament did at times pass private bills which had the effect of divorces, but they constituted exceptions to a universal rule to which he would be glad to have no exceptions hereafter.

Mr. Barnard (Victoria, B.C.) said the divorce courts of British Columbia worked satisfactorily. He moved an amendment that the whole subject be referred to a select committee.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier said the effort seemed to be to make divorce easier. To this he was opposed. He thought the fewer divorces we had in this country the better.

Upon motion of the Prime Minister the debate was adjourned. Mr. Borden said that he could not quite agree with the Minister of Justice that Canada had no divorce procedure. People came here to get divorces from Parliament, just as in other countries they went to the courts. He thought that the proceedings were unnecessarily expensive and that many reforms might be introduced into our Parliamentary procedure, especially in the way of preventing collusion between the parties. However, all divorce bills originated in the Senate and the Senate committee was practically the divorce court. He therefore suggested a conference with the Senate and the appointment hereafter of a joint committee to investigate the whole question, not with the idea of establishing divorce courts but for the purpose of improving the Parliamentary procedure.

Will Finish Job In a Year.

LONDON, Ont., Feb. 17.—The electrification of the London and Port Stanley Railway will be completed a year from March 1.

The experts and engineer engaged by the commission have gone over the work and report that it can be completed in a year's time. Options have been secured on a large bulk of material and it will be ready for delivery at the earliest possible moment.

Towed Into Port.

BEAUFFORT, N.C., Feb. 17.—Leaking badly and with sails striped from her masts by gales, the schooner Bayard Hopkins was towed into Cape Lookout Cove for temporary refuge last night by the revenue cutter Seminole. One member of the schooner's crew was reported in a serious condition, having been injured while attempting to repair the ship's rigging.

IN A FAMOUS CATHEDRAL.

Views From the Upper Regions of St. Paul's, in London.

The famous whispering gallery of St. Paul's cathedral, London, is reached by a flight of twenty steps from the library. This gallery, which is about 210 feet above the cathedral floor, is noted for a curious echo and is so named because a whisper uttered near the wall on one side of it is distinctly audible to a person standing on the other side, a distance of 108 feet in a straight line.

From this point a good view is obtained of the church interior, the tessellated pavement of which looks like a minute chessboard, but it is liable to cause giddiness to any one not used to heights. It also commands the best view of Thornhill's paintings and of the cathedral generally.

From the whispering gallery 118 steps lead up to the stone gallery, an outer gallery with a stone parapet running round the base of the dome. Here in the clear sky of early morning may often be obtained a wonderful view of London, a view which is still more extensive from the golden gallery above the dome.

From this point the lantern may be ascended by a spiral staircase to the golden ball, where six persons may stand at once.—Argonaut.

A MALIGNANT GROWTH

Rogersque Electoral Corruption Contagion Breaking out all Over the Dominion.

All right thinking Canadians are hostile to electoral corruption. In that fact lies the confident hope that the recent exposures of glaring instances of the grossest kind of machine politics both in provincial and federal bye-elections will soon work their own remedy. Once alive to the true situation, patriotic Canadians will enforce decency and honesty in politics.

Reference need not be made to the outrageous methods by which the bye-election in Macdonald, Hochelaga and Chateaugay, respectively, were won for the Ottawa Government by the Rogers' "machine." Those methods have already been widely discussed and condemned in the newspapers of the country. There have been of late other equally disgraceful instances of improper tactics in behalf of provincial Conservative candidates in the bye-elections in Manitoba and Nova Scotia and New Brunswick.

In a provincial bye-election in Nova Scotia last year an attempt was made to influence the electors by publishing to them the supplementary estimates for their riding before those estimates had been submitted to Parliament by Hon. Mr. Rogers, the Minister responsible for them. In the recent bye-election in Victoria, Nova Scotia, a Dominion Government steamer, the Alert, was used to carry Conservative workers and Conservative whiskey into that local option constituency. In the Provincial bye-election in York, N. B., promises of new Federal public works for the constituency were held out by a gentleman who said that he spoke with the authority of Mr. Rogers and a Government engineer was hurried to the spot in order to give color of sincerity to the promises.

But bad as these things may have been they were trivial when compared with the methods by which the Provincial riding of Gimli, Manitoba, was won for the Roblin Government by the Rogers-Roblin "machine."

Corruption almost unbelievable was practised last fall on behalf of E. L. Taylor, the Conservative nominee. His election was protested by the Liberals. By resort to legal technicalities, by absence from the province at a time when it was sought to serve papers upon him, Mr. Taylor stayed off the hearing of the protest until the opening of the Legislature when proceedings were automatically stayed. To put final end to the case and prevent the revelation of the methods by which the election was won, Mr. Taylor and the Rogers-Roblin "machine" relied upon the fact that the Provincial elections are to be held shortly after the close of the Legislature's session.

But this reliance is vain. The extent of the corruption practised in Gimli has now been revealed in charges made in the Legislature by T. H. Johnson, a Liberal member. Mr. Johnson has made his charges and has pledged his seat in the House that they are true.

What are those charges? Are they serious or trivial? The facts, answer.

the "machine" set out to win the riding for Mr. Taylor. Not only is this charge made but the items in the public accounts which establish the charge have been pointed out.

Mr. Johnson charges that employees of the Government directed and carried on the campaign of corruption—bribing, intimidating, distributing liquor in local option districts, protecting law-breakers. He does more than this. He cites names, dates, places, offences.

He gives the names of Provincial Constables, Road Inspectors and other employees of the Manitoba Government who gave money and liquor to electors. He tells of whiskey distributed among foreign voters in oil cans and in barrels marked "salt pork." He tells of J. B. Lauzon, a former Conservative of the Manitoba Legislature, offering money to electors. He cites the case of a man to whom Mr. Lauzon offered no less than $300. He tells of the distribution of whiskey on Sundays as well as week days. Bringing the matter directly home to Mr. Taylor, Mr. Johnson cites the case of an elector who had liquor which the man himself said he had received from Mr. Taylor.

Mr. Johnson had spoiled the "machines" plan of preventing exposure. He has made the facts public and under circumstances which make it impossible to believe that they are other than he has stated them to be; a man does not pledge his seat in Parliament unless he is sure of his ground. Mr. Johnson has shown that Gimli was won by the Rogers-Roblin "machine" by means of a veritable carnival of election criminality.

The toleration of such methods as those outlined above must put a premium on crookedness in politics and makes the election trickster and scoundrel the man of power and the honorable citizen a man of no influence in the affairs of his country.

Whether followed by Grit or by Tory such methods merit only the severest condemnation. But they have become more frequent and their use more brazen since men of the Rogers' school of politics gained power in Dominion and Provincial affairs. Conditions will grow worse, not better, unless the right-minded Conservatives join with opponents of the Ottawa Government in teaching the Ministry's election "expert" the lesson which is imperatively necessary in the public interest.

NO PARCEL POST.

RATES ARE FIXED SO THAT EXPRESS COMPANIES NEED NOT WORRY.

It may possibly have been due to the sudden drop in temperature which produced zero weather all over Canada following the inauguration of Hon. L. P. Pelletier's Parcel Post system that the first trial of the new system has proved more or less of a frost. There has been so far no rush to take advantage of the new rates and Mr. Pelletier himself has intimated that he does not think there will be any great rush for some time to come, and that the competition offered by the Parcel Post system is not intended to be a very severe one to the Express Companies. The contrast between the Canadian rates on parcel post and the rates in force in the United States gives ground for Mr. Pelletier's expectations, that there will be no very strenuous objections from the Railway or Express Companies. In the United States where Parcel Post has become immensely popular the first zone at the start was 50 miles and it has since been extended to 150 miles. The weight of parcels has since been raised to 50 pounds, while in Canada for the first three months the weight is limited to 6 pounds for a 20-mile zone and after

Perhaps the two boxes of cigars which Hon. Mr. Pelletier received via parcel post on the day the system was opened, each came from an express company.

ALL RECORDS BROKEN—UNFORTUNATELY.

The official statement of Dominion finances for the month of January shows that the Government has broken all records. The difference between falling revenue and increased expenditures was never more marked in the history of Canada. During January the net debt increased by $10,821,705. Expenditures increased by over $4,000,000 as compared with January last year, while revenue decreased by nearly $2,000,000. Instead of making ends meet Finance Minister White succeeded in going to the bad by over $10,000,000 last month while the balance on wrong side of the account showed an increase of $6,000,000 as compared with January of last year. No other Finance Minister in the history of Canada has been able to approach this record for one month.

ANGLING FOR THE BIG JOB.

PREMIER BORDEN HAS HIS TROUBLES WITH RIVAL CLAIMANTS FOR HIGH COMMISSIONER.

The rival aspirations of distinguished Canadian patriots to serve their Country and Empire at London as Canadian High Commissioner is proving decidedly trying to Premier Borden's nerves. The political patronage pot was never boiling more fiercely than at present. Each day brings its quota of political intrigue and a new embarrassment for the Premier in trying to keep the peace between the warring factions.

Premier Borden, himself is said to be not indisposed to relinquish the constant worries of the coalition leadership for a serene and distinguished position at London. Not a few of the Premier's own supporters are kindly disposed toward this suggestion. Ever since he assumed the reins of office Mr. Borden has not been free from the embarrassment and annoyance of the cabals within his party following that more than once forced him to the verge of resigning while he was leader of the Opposition. There are many who would see Hon. "Bob" Rogers at the head, in name as well as in fact.

The arrival in Ottawa this week of Sir Charles Hibbert Tupper lent a zest in this phase of the situation. The scion of the old Sir Charles would not be averse to "being around" when the leadership fell vacant. Besides, if the friends of Sir Richard McBride who is conceded to be "losing something of his grip" in British Columbia, should make an eleventh hour effort to secure the big post for the picturesque western Premier, young Sir Charles wouldn't mind a bit tossing a handful of sand into the machinery. Of course Sir Richard has said once, and reiterated several times, that he doesn't want the High Commissionership. And everybody in Ottawa seems to appreciate the admirable histrionic ability that enables him thus to stand aloof and protest too much.

Hon. W. J. Hanna, Provincial Secretary and would-be Premier of Ontario, also drifted to the Capital on Wednesday and made his way promptly to Parliament Hill. "Just dropped in to see the boys," he declared as he joined a coterie of members in the Conservative room off Commons chamber. But if the "boys" would just prevail upon the leaders here to call Hon. Adam Beck to the London post, even to the Proudfoot charges would not, according to his admirers, Ontario, also drawn to the Capital on Wednesday and made his way promptly to Parliament Hill. "Just dropped in to see the boys," he declared as he joined a coterie of members in the Conservative room off Commons chamber. But if the "boys" would just prevail upon their leaders here to call Hon. Adam Beck to the London post, even to the Proudfoot charges would not, according to his admirers, be any effectual barrier to the Hanna aspirations.

In Montreal, where Sir Hugh Graham is busy through the Telegraph-Herald lambasting the Government—and consecrating his energies through the Star to exalting it—there is a growing boom in favor of Lord Mount Stephen. Lord Mount Stephen was born in 1829 and therefore couldn't be expected to hold the High Commissioner's post long, in any event. Consequently there will be every possibility of another vacancy later on, when the Becks, the McBrides, and other aspirants would have been otherwise provided for, and when the Government would more likely have to fall back on the Canadian Northcliffe, at the head of the Montreal newspaper combine.

Then there is Hon. J. D. Hazen. The chief asset of the Minister of Marine and Fisheries is that he makes the appearance. More than good looks are required in a successful politician or administrator, and many of his party friends argue that the fortunes of the Conservatives in New Brunswick would not suffer were the Minister despatched to London.

Last, but not least, is Hon. Robert Rogers. He smiles and says nothing, except to a very few intimate friends. But the Hon. "Bob" is generally thinking industriously about his own interests. If it is to be the Premiership for him well and good. If not, why not London? The Minister from Manitoba is the Master of the Administration. After all is said and done what he declares goes. And his confidants hint strongly that he is going to say "London."

Dairy Cow Temperament.

Nervous temperament in a cow does not mean a high state of nervousness or irritability, but that the animal has nerves such as make the various parts active, giving tone, vitality and activity to the many parts of the body, says Better Farming. This important characteristic is judged by the size and character of her eyes. Her face should be broad between the eyes and well dishd. The eyes should be prominent, bright, clear and mild, but not at all sluggish looking. The backbone should be covered with no surplus flesh, for if it is the cow is using to fatten herself that which should go into the milk pail. The ribs should be wide in themselves and should have plenty of width between them. This can be measured by inserting the fingers between the ribs. Persistency in chewing the cud is a very accurate indication of the sort of temperament that is to be found in the dairy cow.

DISEASE KEEPS YOU WELL.

If You Have One Malady Others Will Give You Wide Berth.

Peculiar to relate, some of the diseases that afflict man are most beneficial if only man can throw them off.

Take smallpox, a most virulent disease indeed. Yet if you recover from this malady it seems to give quite a new lease of life, and certain it is that those who have had smallpox usually live to ripe old age, and what is more rarely suffer from any other troubles.

Again, typhoid fever is a malignant disease altogether, but it has its good points—If you recover. For example, suppose you have been an acute sufferer from indigestion, and contract typhoid fever. On recovery you will find that your indigestion is a thing of the past. And, what is more you will never again be troubled by it, granted always that you are careful. Typhoid fever renews the stomach—in fact, it gives one the stomach of an infant again in very many cases.

Bronchitis—a nasty trouble; that is chronic bronchitis. Now this trouble can be of great service to you, although the statement may seem strange. But if you have chronic bronchitis you are uncommonly care-

It was on a Broadway car. A passenger stooped and picked up a coin from the floor. Three of the other passengers eyed him with envy.

He said, "Which of you people dropped a five dollar gold piece?"

"I did," yelled each of the three.

"Well," said the finder to the man nearest him, "here's a nickel of it."—New York Times.

Mrs. Hamilton Tells How She Finally Found Health in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Warren, Ind. "I was bothered terribly with female weakness. I had pains and was not regular, my head ached all the time, I had bearing down pains and my back hurt me the biggest part of the time, I was dizzy and had weak feelings when I would stoop over, it hurt me to walk any distance and I felt blue and discouraged.

"I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and am now in good health. If it had not been for that medicine I would have been in my grave a long time ago."—Mrs. ARTIE E. HAMILTON, R.F.D. No. 6, Warren, Ind.

I hope that many suffering women will try your medicine. It makes happier wives and mothers."—Mrs. ANNA HANSEN, Esmond, Rhode Island.

A Horse's Toenails.

Few persons realize that a horse's hoof is really the same thing as the toe nails of human beings or of animals having toes. The horn of a hoof grows just as a toe nail does. The hoof grows more rapidly in shod horses than in those wearing shoes, and it grows faster in horses which are well groomed and well fed. But on an average the horn grows about a third of an inch a month. Hind hoofs grow faster than fore hoofs. The toe of the hoof being the longest part, it takes longer for the horn to grow down there than at the heel. For instance, the toe will grow entirely down in from eleven to thirteen months, while the heel will grow down in from three to five months. As the new horn grows out any cracks or defects in the old gradually work down to where they can be cut off, just as with human finger nails you can watch the progress of a bruise from the root to the tip.

are careful. Typchoa fever renews the stomach—in fact, it gives one the stomach of an infant again in very many cases.

Bronchitis—a nasty trouble; that is chronic bronchitis. Now this trouble can be of great service to you, although the statement may seem strange. But if you have chronic bronchitis you are uncommonly careful of yourself: you coddle yourself a bit, and see that you are well protected from cold. The same applies to an ordinary cold, of course.

But bronchitis is of special benefit to people up in years, for it keeps the blood moving—each time the sufferer coughs puts a slight strain on the heart, and very naturally this assists the blood in its circulating through the body. As a matter of fact, chronic bronchitis keeps the heart of elderly persons working away quite nicely.

Rheumatism! Quite a horrible malady! But a useful one, too. Persons afflicted with rheumatism usually live to a green old age. Why? Well, if you have rheumatism you are not liable to contract other troubles. Indeed, rheumatism seems to act as a protection against many of the ills that flesh is heir to, and the result is that the rheumatic person keeps in very good general health.

Pearls Are Good Investment.

So great has been the rise in the price of pearls during the last 15 years that it is estimated a necklace bought for $100,000 at the end of the 19th century might now be expected to fetch $1,000,000.

With the constant increase of wealth the value of pearls is likely to continue to increase and a good collection may be regarded as one of the most profitable of investments.

The surface of a pearl is a sure test of its genuineness. The real pearl has a wrinkled skin, while the imitation, one if rubbed on another surface, slips along easily. To scratch a false pearl is to have the same sensation as if one scratched one's teeth with a finger nail.

His Honor Vindicated.

A couple of good-natured Frenchmen got into a quarrel and challenged each other to fight. On the morning of the duel they and their seconds tramped through the woods to the fatal spot, when one of the duelists, the challenging party, tripped and fell. His second helped him to his feet.

"I hope you are not much hurt," said the other duelist. "I'm not much hurt. I only bumped my nose on the ground." "Does it bleed?" "Yes, a little."

"Heaven be praised! Blood flows, and my honor is vindicated. Give me your hand, old boy!"

Reason For Pride.

"But," she objected, "you must remember that one of my ancestors came over in the Mayflower. I am afraid my people would object to you on the ground that your grandfather was an immigrant. We descendants of the pilgrims are very proud of our stock, you know."

"Well, I suppose you have a right to be. I've got three or four descendants of pilgrims working for me, and they seem to be good, honest fellows."

FARMER'S POULTRY CLASS

The Napanee Poultry Association were much pleased with the exhibits of poultry by farmers at the 1914 Poultry Show. To further encourage farmers to exhibit at the 1915 Poultry Show, President W. T. Gibbard announces the following prices: $30 in cash will be paid as follows: For the best pen of 1 cockerel and 4 pullets raised, owned, and exhibited by any bona-fide farmer in the counties of Lennox and Addington ten dollars will be paid in each of the following classes: Barred Plymouth Rocks—1st, $5.00; 2nd, 3; 3rd, $2. White Wyandottes—1st, $5; 2nd, $3; 3rd, $2. S.

C. Rhode Island Reds—1st, $5; 2nd $3; 3rd, $2.

Farmers should prepare now to win this prize by selecting a pen of their best birds and save these eggs for hatching, or better by buying the very best eggs for hatching they can obtain. It is hoped that farmers will take advantage of this liberal offer by the Napanee Poultry Association, and exhibit in large numbers. This class of Farmer's poultry will be judged under the Utility Poultry Standard recently adopted by the American Poultry Association, and first used at the 1914 Boston Poultry Show, where farmers exhibited over 400 birds. Under the Utility Standard color counts only 10 points, instead of 40 as in the Exhibition Standard, and size, constitution and fleshing qualities are of highest importance.

Further information may be obtained from Mr. G. B. Curran, Sec-Treas., of the Napanee Poultry Association.

DESCRIPTION AND SUGGESTIONS TO EXHIBITORS.

Weight or size—Inasmuch as weight is an important factor in market poultry, 10 points have been allowed for it. It must not be understood that item represents only one-tenth of the value of a market bird. It is of much greater importance than that, but the disqualification clause takes care of a portion of this value. There is no reason why breeders of market poultry should not keep their stock up to standard weight at least. These weights are given under the classification that follows and will not be repeated here. Size should be considered as well as weight. In other words, an excessively fat bird is not necessary a large one, so the general frame of the bird should be considered.

Condition—Condition has to do with practically three things—the general health of the specimen, as shown by its appearance; cleanliness, or its fitness in general for exhibition, and the plumpness as determined by the amount of flesh it carries. Birds with colds, or running at the nose, or having pale faces or combs should not be placed on exhibition. Also those with scaly legs, bumble foot, emaciated to any extent, or plumage matted or soiled, have no place in the show room. The exhibitor should endeavor to have his birds clean, free from vermin and in good flesh.

Head—From many points of view the head of a utility bird is not considered extremely important, but other view-points it is extremely so. The head is not only a fine index to the general health of the specimen, but shows its alertness, vigor and snap. Again, if the head is over large it increases the waste portion of the dressed specimen, and if it is too small and refined it indicates lack of vitality. The best specimens should have a medium sized head with short, stubby beak, (which denotes strength) fairly curved, a short face, or short from the eye to the end of the beak, broad between the eyes, with comb set well upon the head and fairly thick, especially at the base, and standing up well: The eye should be a good size, bright, clear and snappy. The face should have a good healthy color. Long, slim beaks and crow headedness denote weakness, also lopped combs in many instances, so such specimens should be avoided. This does not refer to Mediterranean and Dorking females, whose combs naturally lop. The combs of rose comb varieties should set square on the head and be of medium size.

plenty of room. The back should be long, as well as broad, but we want the length to be out of proportion to the breadth, and give a narrow appearance. This is to long back does not mean Wyandotte and Orpington I should try to breed long Rock.

Tail—The tail should be length, well spread and carried too high nor too low. When is carried too high it makes it appear short and sawed off and when carried too low it droops appearance. Most varieties look best carrying the tail at an angle of about 45 degrees.

Breast—From the market or point of view the breast is the important part of the bird, as it takes more meat proportional to another part. It should be round, full, broad and of good shape. Avoid those birds that have sharp or flat breasts, and that are too much just in front of the body. A bird having a full crop must be mistaken for one with a full breast.

Body—Body used in this sense includes those portions of the specimen exclusive of tail and breast. In other words, slides, underline, and the base below the tail, or what is termed fluff. In the body then, we measure for depth and length as the breast governs the breadth or width. To measure the depth, place the thumb on the middle back just back of and underneath the wing, and allow the fingers to run down the side to the keel. We look for great depth at this point. The side view of the bird should show a body extending well back of a line passing through the knee. This gives the specimen a well rounded appearance, and also a large frame on which to put the underline. The underline should be fairly straight and specimens whose abdomen or appears buggy should be avoided as this shows a tendency to down.

Legs and Toes—The legs should be fairly short in a good market specimen also stout and well apart. The legs are evidence of sturdiness and vigor. They should be of good color, orange or yellow, except in varieties which naturally have slate, white, or pinkish white. The toes should be straight and strong.

Skin—The color of the skin is an important factor in market poultry. Most of our best market specimens are of orange or yellow varieties. A good yellow leg is a good indication of the color of the skin.

Color—Other things being equal, the best colored specimens are chosen. The demand among breeders for better colored specimens is becoming greater every year because of the great demand for stock and eggs for hatching and the person who has stock scribed above with at least some added, has the best opportunity for breeders and eggs for hatching. It is not expected that the breeder will "go to seed" or that he wants primarily are and eggs, but color of feathers is a factor in the selection of specimens.

The foregoing points are in keeping with the requirements as set forth in the standard of Perfection applicable to all our common and varieties.

This does not refer to Mediterranean and Dorking females, whose combs naturally lop. The combs of rose comb varieties should set square on the head and be of medium size.

Neck—This portion of the bird should not be too long, but fairly short, as such a neck indicates strength and will also cut down the waste, as it is not considered a valuable part of the carcass. The neck should be well curved, bringing the head well back over the front part of the breast so as to give the bird as compact an appearance as possible.

Wings—The wings of market birds should be short and held well in place. As a large portion of the wings is waste material, the shorter and plumper we can get them, the better. Split and twisted wings are inherited and should, therefore, be avoided.

Back—The back should be broad and straight, not only broad across the shoulders just back of the neck but the breadth should be carried back to the tail. One of the great weaknesses of birds is the narrowing of the back from neck to tail. Avoid the double pitch-roof type of back. As it forms the framework of the body of the bird, it is extremely important. Again the reproductive organs lie below the back, and we want them to have room. The back should be well as broad, but we do not length to be out of proportion breadth, and give the bird appearance. This reference back does not mean that Otte and Orpington breeders try to breed long Rock backs. The tail should be medium well spread and carried neither too high it makes the bird short and sawed off behind, nor too low it gives it a appearance. Most of our look best carrying their tails angle of about 45 degrees.

From the market or utility view the breast is the most important part of the bird, as it contains meat proportionally than any part. It should be deep, full, broad and of good length. Those birds that have narrow, flat breasts, and that are cut just in front of the legs, having a full crop must not be in for one with a full breast.

Body used in this sense in those portions of the real body specimens exclusive of the back end. In other words, the underline, and the back part of the tail, or what is termed the body then, we must look at length as the back and over the breadth or thickness measure the depth, place the thumb on the middle of the back of and underneath the tail allow the fingers to pass side to the keel. We should great depth at this point. A view of the bird should show the tending well back of a vertical line through the knee joint. The specimen a well balanced appearance, and also gives a me on which to put meat. The line should be fairly straight inmens whose abdomen sags or is baggy should be avoided, shows a tendency to break nd Toes—The legs should be in a good market specimen stout and well apart. Such evidence of sturdiness and they should be of good color, or yellow, except in those which naturally have black, blue, or pinkish white legs. They should be straight and strong. The color of the skin is important in a market or utility specimen of our best markets of orange or yellow skinned. A good yellow leg is usual of the color of the skin. Other things being equal, the best specimens should be. The demand among utility for better colored specimens is increasing every year because the great demand for breeders and eggs for hatching, and person who has stock as a hobby with at least some color is the best opportunity to sell breeders and eggs for hatcheries not expected that the utility will "go to seed" on color. Wants primarily are meat but color of feathers should be in the selection of exhibitors.

LOCAL PEOPLE IN MIX-UP.

Some Goods Stolen From Napanee Drug Store Believed to be in Belleville.

Chief Graham of Napanee is in the city to-day in connection with charges of receiving stolen goods preferred against three citizens. It appears that Hooper's drug store in Napanee was robbed on Jan. 8th, of this year and about $300 worth of goods stolen. Chief Graham was notified of the affair and conducted an investigation. Traces of some of the stolen articles were found, and a supposed clue led to Belleville.

The story appears to be that the man who stole the drug store articles came to Belleville representing himself to be a traveller. He met a young man and said he had lost his job and wished to dispose of his samples. The young man referred him to a local salesman who finally purchased the goods.

The goods which are believed to be some of those stolen at Napanee are valued at about $25.

The young man who was first met and the salesman and his partner were charged in police court this morning with receiving goods knowing the same to have been stolen. As the crown was not ready to proceed, the cases were adjourned a week. The first young man was given his liberty on his own recognizance and bail was set for the other two at two sureties of $250 each.—Belleville, Ontario, Feb. 17th. Much credit is due to the Belleville police for their prompt action in the matter.

ONTARIO LEGISLATURE.

With a function marked by the usual brilliance and formality, the Ontario Legislature opened on Wednesday, February 18th. The comparative convalescence of the Prime Minister encouraged more gaiety than would have been the case if Sir James had still been in critical condition.

It is generally agreed, however, that Sir James will be unable to return to active political life and the problem of choosing his successor is giving the Conservative party more worry even than the general public would imagine. In fact the Conservative members themselves admit a trace of pessimism.

Hon. J. J. Foy will lead the House this session but he does not want the post permanently. Who, then, will be the leader of the Government?

The Conservatives feel so uncertain about it that they are comparing the present situation in Ontario with that which followed the retirement of Sir John A. Macdonald in the Federal Field. The Conservative party after a few years of weak rule and dissension went to pieces and a Liberal Government came into power. Such a breakdown is feared now in Ontario.

Hon. Adam Beck will not serve under Hon W. J. Hanna, nor will the latter act under the former. In spite of his undoubted elements of strength moreover, there are increasing protests against the selection of Mr. Hanna. Not only is he under the shadow of the Proudfoot charges which established a serious case against the Minister, backed up by his own admission, and which admittedly were not given a full investigation, but he is also Corporation Council for the Standard Oil interests in Ontario and this important fact alone is militating strongly against the selection of such a man for the position of Prime Minister.

PERSONAL OR RACE SALVATION, WHICH?

Pastor Russell's "Movies" Teach Both Sides.

Moody and Beecher Quoted by Dr. Abbott as Representing Opposing Views of Salvation—Pastor Russell Shows That Both Views Are Biblical—At Opening of Photo-Drama of Creation in Indianapolis

In Indianapolis, Ind., Feb. 15.—Pastor Russell is here to-day, opening the PHOTO-DRAMA OF CREATION at Tomlinson Hall. Besides the initial expense of this beautiful and instructive Drama, it must cost a fabulous sum to have it going in several places at one time—New York, Boston, Cleveland, Cincinnati, St. Louis and here—Chicago and other places soon! Whence is the money for so grand a cause—all free! is the question everywhere. Why do you not charge a dollar a seat?

Pastor Russell's only answer is, "I cannot sell the Gospel. Jesus and His Apostles never took up collections, nor authorized me to beg in God's name, so far as the Bible shows. People blest by the Message voluntarily send me money to further the work of re-establishing faith in God and the Bible amongst thinking people. In proportion as God supplies it we spend it. It must be so!"

The Pastor's text was, "God wills that all shall be saved and come to a knowledge of the Truth." (1 Timothy 2:4.) He declared that this salvation will be from all sin, sickness and death, which all inherit from Adam; and that it will be ushered in by Christ's Kingdom. The salvation now in progress is that of the Church—a "chief," or superior salvation. However, the Second Death will be the portion of all who prefer sin to holiness.

Dr. Abbott on Beecher and Moody.

In the course of his sermon the Pastor quoted Dr. Lyman Abbott, Beecher's successor as Pastor of Plymouth Church, Brooklyn, as having said, in an address at a Beecher Memorial service last October, that Mr. Beecher had remarked to him, "Mr. Moody believes that this is a lost world, and is trying to save some from the wreck. I believe that it is the world itself which is to be saved, and that its kingdoms are to become the Kingdom of our Lord and of His Christ."

Commenting upon these two views, which generally prevail to-day, the Pastor showed that they are not contradictory, but that both contain an element of truth, and that both have Scriptural support. The right understanding of the Bible lies in seeing that both views are parts of a general whole. Whoever gets a glimpse of that whole, the speaker declared, thereby increases both his confidence in the Bible and also his faith and hope toward God; but whoever fails to get that comprehensive Brief, But Crushing.

He was very badly in love and had sat up till the "wee sma' hours" composing the following lines:

Beautiful one, with eyes so blue,
Oh, how my fond heart sighs for you!

Sweet spirit, listen to me now;
Hear once again my ardent vow.

He wrote a yard of this soul in- spiring verse and sent it to the ob- ject of his adoration, with a request that she would express an opinion on its merits. This is what he re- ceived:

"Dear Mr. Hopkins," she wrote, "I do not like to hurt your feelings, but if you will read the initial let- ters of your first four lines down- word I may say that they express my sentiments exactly."

The Color of Jade.

The idea of jade possessing the virtue of bringing the wearer good fortune arose in China. The best specimens represent all the hues and effects of sea foam, but these are eagerly snapped up by collectors and seldom come into the public market. There is another cause for the popu- larity of jade. Its peculiar green tinge has the effect of making the human skin look very white. In this connection the quality of the stone is of no account so long as the color is there. Indeed, many of the less ex- pensive jade ornaments are made from chips of the stone which con- tain noticeable flaws. — Pearson's Weekly.

Might Have Been Worse.

A young woman from the west was making a visit to an old seaport town. One morning while driving with her host she said:

"What is the diet of all these peo- ple?"

"Fish mostly," responded the man. "Why," spoke the westerner, "I thought fish was a brain food. These are really the most unintelligent look- ing people I ever saw."

"Well," replied the host, "just think what they would look like if they didn't eat fish!"

There was no important change in the condition of the market for cattle today, but the feeling was very firm, especially for the better grades of butchers' stock, as the supply was rather small.

Train Wrecked at Open Switch.

CALGARY, Feb. 17.—What is said by C.P.R. officials to be the work of train wreckers caused a railroad smashup at Bellevue at 2.10 yester- day morning, when two engines were derailed, with the result that a man was killed. A double-header freight train, westbound, ran into an open switch, the engines jumping the rails and crashing into the ditch, both turning over.

Engineer Harry Thompson, former- ly of Belleville, Ont., who lived at Macleod and who is well known among trainmen in Calgary, was thrown under one of the engines and killed.

element of truth, and that both have Scriptural support. The right un- derstanding of the Bible lies in see- ing that both views are parts of a general whole. Whoever gets a glimpse of that whole, the speaker declared, thereby increases both his confidence in the Bible and also his faith and hope toward God; but whoever fails to get that comprehen- sive view remains weak in faith and uncertain of his theology.

The End of the Discord.

The Pastor then demonstrated that Mr. Moody merely held to the teach- ings of Jesus, the Apostles and the Prophets when he declared that man was created perfect, in God's image, but had brought the death sentence upon himself through disobedience to his Creator's just commands. This curse of death is the cause of all our mental, moral and physical weak- nesses. He showed that while the reaction of civilization through the influence of Christianity was indeed a step upward for many, yet it was not a step out of degradation; for sin and death still prevail.

Next the Pastor pointed out that the Gospel of Christ has not yet saved the world. Nevertheless, it has brought peace and joy to all fol- lowers of Jesus. These are to ex- perience completeness of salvation at our Lord's Second Coming, when they shall be changed from earthly to Heavenly nature.

The Right in Beecher's Theory.

Mr. Beecher's view, the Pastor stated, also contains Bible truth. He then demonstrated from Scripture that although the kingdoms of this world have not yet become our Lord's, nevertheless the final out- come of the Divine Plan will include this transfer.

Contrasting these two views, the Pastor showed that Mr. Moody saw what Mr. Beecher failed to see, and that Mr. Beecher saw what Mr. Moody failed to see. Both views are Biblical, and neither is satisfactory without the other.

The Glorious View of the Bible.

The Pastor then presented the Scriptural view. Adam fell from the moral image and likeness of his Creator. Because of Messiah's sac- rifice he is to have the opportunity to rise again to that original perfec- tion. This opportunity will be open to all his posterity—the human race. To this end they will be assisted by Messiah's Kingdom, which will rule earth's affairs in favor of righteous- ness.

The Church's salvation, in progress since Pentecost, is to a Heavenly nature. But the world's salvation is to be a restoration to perfect human nature, which will find perfection of enjoyment in a world-wide Eden. Then Mr. Moody's anticipations and Mr. Beecher's broad hopes will be more than fulfilled.

SHORT COURSE IN AGRICULTURE.

The name Alfalfa is from an Arabic word meaning "the best fodder," which honor it can certainly still claim. It is a true perennial plant, smooth, upright, branching, ordinarily growing from one to four feet high, yet in some instances much higher, owing to conditions of soil, climate and cultivation.

There appears no record of a time when alfalfa was not in some portions of the world one of Nature's most generous benefactions to husbandry and an important feature of a profitable agriculture. Its beginning seems to have been contemporary with that of man, and as with man, its habitation was Central Asia.

It was carried by the Persians into Greece in 490 B. C. It is known to have been cultivated in Northern Africa about the time it was brought to Italy. The Moors from Northern Africa introduced it to Spain about 711 A. D. From Spain it crossed to France, and later to Belgium and England.

Alfalfa was brought to Mexico by the Spaniards in the year 1519, also to Peru and Chili a few years later, where it has since luxuriantly flourished. About 1854 it was introduced into Northern California, from Chili, but it has been grown by the Spaniards and Indians in Southern California for probably a hundred years.

In Canada, Alfalfa is now being grown mostly in the southern part of Ontario and to a limited extent in Western Canada.

Farmers are eager to learn how to grow Alfalfa, owing to the great feeding quality it contains, as it is rich in Protein, a great food for developing stock, building up principally bone, blood and muscle. It also enriches the soil, because of its marvelous root development going into the sub-soil as low as twenty feet bringing up large amounts of Lime, Potash, and Phosphoric acid. In one case roots were found penetrating through crevices in the roof of a tunnel one hundred and twenty-nine feet below the surface of an alfalfa field.

Alfalfa will not establish itself on poor soils. It must be built up by manuring and cultivation, but once it has a start it will keep the soil permanently maintained in fertility.

What makes the landscape look so fair;
What blossoms bright perfume the air,
What plant repays the farmer's toil,
And will enrich the worn out soil?—
[" Alfalfa."]

What is the crop that always pays,
Which may be cut each forty days.
Resisting drought, the frost and heat,
Whose roots reach down full twenty feet?—
[" Alfalfa."]

Prof. Moore, of Wisconsin gave an excellent address on alfalfa to the corn growers at Windsor last winter, but Prof. C. A. Zavitz claims that there were two points he made that was very misleading to Canadian farmers. One was the recommendation of common alfalfa seed from Montana, on account of the seed being so well adapted to our cold winters, and the other was early June seeding.

On the contrary he claims that early June seeding is liable to be reseed, found no injurious from alfalfa roots. Although the opinion that where tile are to conduct water away from s where there is more or less running practically all the time roots would cause trouble in the roots from willow or maple etc.

WILL ALFALFA KILL BI WEED.

Alfalfa being such a grand crop and bindweed being such a stubborn, distributed pest, the subject takes an importance of first

After wrestling for two seasons bindweed, trying to kill it by cultivation without complete success would naturally be ready for an and less expensive method. Elgin County farmer writes his experience thus—"I have sown on two fields containing patch the weed. On one field I see fine catch and upon breaking the several years later, not a trace bindweed was to be seen. On a field he got a poorer catch of s and here the bindweed was not killed." Another man writes a field we seeded to alfalfa two ago was a patch of the weed field has since been mowed four but not broken and casual examination discovers not a sign of the weed.

When buying alfalfa seed be the very best, bright, plump and from all weed seeds and dodges not adulterated with yellow t. Don't get seed from warmer climate and expect it to grow in colder

On a well prepared seed bed it less seed than a poorly prepared on the former eight to ten per while on the latter fifteen to twenty five pounds according to condition the ground.

Alfalfa should not be pastured first two or three years, or eat the spring or too late in the Swine do not hurt the alfalfa as much as horses, cattle, etc. should be taken as to the bloated cattle and sheep when turned in alfalfa field.

If the young alfalfa is clipped height of about 6 to 8 inches send shoots out from the crown, cutting the plant finer and thicker. cutting alfalfa cut it when about tenth in bloom thus letting the seed grow out from the crown giving crop per season. Care should be taken to save the leaves as the worth nearly four times as much the stems. When cutting alfalfa cut it after the dew has dried and let it wilt. When cured it is barn.

A neighbor of ours seeded s fields to alfalfa a few years ago found it not suitable for his land is cold, quick, red sand bottom the most of it winter killed. ploughing it up and seeding alfalfa.

SOME ALFALFA "MUSTS" AND "DON'TS."

First of all the seed must be of high germinating power, and of highest possible vitality. The must have lime. The land must be well drained, and it must be fer a depth of at least nine inches.

Don't sow on freshly ploughed no matter how carefully prepared. Don't let weeds or grass grow six inches high without clipping.

Prof. C. A. Zavitz claims that there were two points he made that was very misleading to Canadian farmers.
One was the recommendation of common alfalfa seed from Montana, on account of the seed being so well adapted to our cold winters, and the other was early June seeding.

On the contrary he claims that early June seeding is liable to be followed by severe hot drought before the plants have gotten a fair start, and thinks if one watches his chance, has his ground ready and sows in July or early August just after a rain, he will get a quick growth and the Alfalfa will come through the winter alright.

Alfalfa thrives best and survives longest on the hard clay hillsides, where other crops do poorly, as, "Alfalfa will not stand wet feet." It does not do well where the water is nearer to the surface than six feet, or where in winter, water will stand on the ground for over forty-eight hours.
If the land is at all sour, for want of proper drainage, drain it, and apply lime, before seeding it to Alfalfa.

Too much acidity in the soil is bad for Alfalfa. This is often the case where corn and wheat have been raised for many years, thus robbing the soil of much lime ; a condition that may be remedied by an application of lime to the land just before sowing the alfalfa, 500 to 1000 pounds per acre.

Alfalfa depends on two things, first the man, and second on the soil.
Many of the most successful growers begin their preparations two or three years before they sow the seed, ploughing it deeply. If sowing after corn, the ground should have a liberal dressing of stable manure ploughed under the humus, to encourage earth worms and help furnish favorable conditions for bacteria, the harrow should follow the plough each day.

Alfalfa like corn and cotton, demands certain conditions of the soil and certain constituents in that soil.
All crops except alfalfa and the other legumes obtain practically all their food, including nitrogen, from the soil.
Alfalfa takes nitrogen from the soil only during the first few months of its growth, and thereafter not only takes its own necessary supply from the air, but a large surplus which it stores in the soil for whatever crop may follow.

SPRING OR FALL SOWING— WHICH ?

As for me I would prefer fall sowing in preference to the spring. Alfalfa sown in the fall with time to secure some growth for winter protection will be ready to respond to the first call of spring, and for the mower early in June. If it fails, from freezing or other cause, little crop-time is lost.
The farmer has but to disk and harrow in April or early May, and sow half as much seed as he sowed in the fall, and he will have prospect of a cutting in eighty or ninety days, at an expenditure of but few pounds of seed and a little labor. If sown in the spring he has weeds to contend with, and if the season is damp and cloudy the weeds will get a start of the alfalfa. Time is also more valuable in the spring and farmers hate to spare the time getting the ground like a garden, as it should be.

The best method is to sow alfalfa without a nurse crop. It needs no protection from the sun and when a nurse crop of any vigor is removed the alfalfa plants are likely to be found weak, spindling and with little root growth, it also robs the nitrogen needed by the young alfalfa, and cutting the nurse crop is liable to damage the tender alfalfa plants.

ALFALFA AND TILE DRAINS.

Mr. R. H. Harding, of Middlesex County, claims he had alfalfa growing over three inch tile drains continuously for about fourteen years except two years that intervened, and when he broke up the alfalfa to clean up and

GONDOLAS OF VENICE DOOMED.

Prosaic Motor Engineers Ousting the Picturesque Gondoliers.

Those who would see the gondolas and the gondoliers of Venice must make haste to visit the wonderful city on the Adriatic, for both are threatened by the prosaic, noisy motor boat.

Already a syndicate has been formed with the object of placing 100 motor boats on the Venetian waters in place of the picturesque gondolas which have hitherto been inseparable from pictures of Venetian life and surroundings.

The first blow to the existence of the gondola was struck nearly 35 years ago when there was introduced a service of omnibus steamers which has since been taken over by the municipality. The old gondolas were about 30 feet long by four or five feet wide, and carried from four to eight passengers, but it is stated that the new motor boats, though not differing greatly in size, will be constructed so as to carry a larger number of passengers.

The gondolier will be missed as greatly as his boat, for he was always a picturesque character and a careful guide, managing his boat with wonderful ease and giving a peculiar air of warning before turning any corner in the narrow canals, and never, even in the close quarters, grazing another boat.

No more will be seen the annual gondola regatta nor the old-time contests between the two factions of the gondoliers, the Nicoletti and the Castellani, and the gathering up of the fragments of his patron's feasts by the hungry boatman. The gondola helped to preserve the fascination of Venice when she herself had fallen into decay and the day of her greatest glory had passed, but now the gondolier, like the old London cab driver, will soon be numbered with the people of the past. Whether a new era of prosperity for Venice will be inaugurated with the new regime remains to be seen.

No one has yet been able to trace the age of the gondola and its introduction into Venice, but the records of its existence here certainly go back to 1094.

Hard Workers.

Only one in 10,000 can be a genius, but any one can be a hard worker, which pays better. The biggest business men are nothing more than the best workmen who have been promoted. The world is full of three-quarters men. They are three-quarters industrious and cannot get all the way. A man should know his job thoroughly and fill it with enthusiasm. His work is his backer, his source of credit, his hope of prosperity and distinction. Be as careful of your job as you are of your note in a bank.

Businesslike Father.

"Father always spoils everything," said Miss Gladys Cumrox tearfully. "I'll never again tell him when anybody proposes to me." "What has he done?" "When Baron Fucash asked for my hand I told him to ask father. And when he called father looked through a card index and said: 'There are three ahead of you, but I don't think any of them will suit. Come around next Thursday.'"

Inquisitive.

"I asked her if her husband smoked," said the woman with an inquiring mind, "and what do you think?"

THE ISLAND OF THE STAIRS

Being a True Account of Certain Strange and Wonderful Adventures of Master John Hampdon, Seaman, and Mistress Lucy Wilberforce, Gentlewoman, In the Great South Seas.

By CYRUS TOWNSEND BRADY

Copyright, 1912, by Cyrus Townsend Brady

We went directly to the stairs and mounted them. Delaying but little on the crest, we crossed it rapidly and finally entered the valley. It was with a feeling of awe that we stood for the first time within the vast cup at the foot of the inner stairs, completely shut out from the world by the great towering rampart of rock which entirely inclosed us. I had never felt so far removed from the world as then. Outside, of course, the limitless ocean ran beyond the barrier reef, but one could follow it unto the dim, faroff distance with his vision. Within the cup the glance fell upon the rocky wall on every hand. It was almost like being in a prison for all its tropic loveliness.

Beneath the trees and quite invisible from above, a paved road or path, barely wide enough for four to walk abreast upon, extended straight across the island to the hillock in the middle, while smaller paths seemed to follow the course of the walls on either side. The ground was gently rolling, and the road, though overgrown in places and badly broken, was in much better condition than the broader path on the ed, like those at the foot of the stairs, into the semblance of monstrous human faces. Not one of them was like another. There was variation in each as there is variation in human faces. All were ugly, but all were lifelike and were singularly enough European.

CHAPTER XIII.

In Which We Enter the Place of Horror

THE statues or images rose from a kind of terrace a foot or so above the level of the platform, paved as before. They formed a sort of cloister, or colonnade, around the central platform, which rose twenty or twenty-five feet above. On the center of the raised platform or altar stood three or more of the same monster heads, placed one after another, the largest one being in the middle. They were in line, all looking in the same direction which my compass told me was due west. They were staring, therefore, toward the setting sun.

At the front end or west end the great platform was approached by a flight of steps. The stones of the pavement were so cunningly fitted together that only here and there had a seed lodged and grass grown. The stones of the platform or altar were also laid up without mortar and fitted in the same way. The altar was in perfect repair.

Standing so high, the fierce winds that swept over the plateau and platform had probably assisted in keeping it clear of vegetation, of anything in fact, for save for a few scattered lines of grass it was as bare as the palm of my hand.

Well, we stood upon the platform and surveyed the scene in silent awe.

"Yes," she replied, "I remember."

"Well, then," I said, "will you go down to the platform out of sight of this horrible place and wait for me?"

"No," she answered nervously, "Master Hampdon, wherever you go I must go. I can never be left alone."

I tried gently to dissuade her, but, as usual, she would have her way, so that at last I gave in.

"Well, then," said I, "at least let me go before."

I stepped down into the great receptacle intending to clear the way with my feet by kicking away the layer of bones, and then, extending my arm behind me with both her hands caught in mine, she followed me down into the inclosure. Of course we had to walk upon the broken remnants of humanity, but I thrust aside as well as I could the larger pieces and skulls, and she, I afterward learned, followed with her eyes tightly closed, trusting entirely to my guidance. Indeed, she clung to my hand with all the nervous strength and power she possessed.

So we finally reached the platform. I lifted her up on it and followed myself. I led my lady carefully around the platform until we could stand at the rear end by the side of the line of statues and look across the island. Sure enough, there was the nick or depression in the wall which Sir Philip had mentioned, although the "bigge palmtree" was gone or else lost amid hundreds of trees like it. Beneath it careful scrutiny showed a rough pyramid of stone leading up to what seemed to be openings in the cliff wall.

So far every detail in the old buccaneer's parchment was absolutely correct. I was certain now that the treasure was there and that we could find it. And a certain exultation filled me. At least we had not come upon a fool's errand, though what good the treasure would do us I did not stop to consider. "We have nothing more to do here," I answered as I led the way to the edge of the low altar.

I leaped down and then turned to help my little mistress. She was very white, and I thought she was going to faint. I don't blame her, the scene was so terrible. I acted promptly. I reached up and took her in my arms and carried her as if she had been a baby, and, indeed, she was no great burden for me. Her head dropped to my shoulder. I didn't know whether she had fainted or not. Her eyes were closed. I ran swiftly across the inclosure, descended the steps and without hesitation turned to the edge of the cliff. I stopped there, cursing myself for not having brought any water, but as I stopped she opened her eyes.

"You are safe," said I gently. "The horrors are all behind us. See, there is before you naught but the beautiful greenery of the island, and"—

An expression of gratitude came across her face.

"Let us go down," she replied. "We must never come near here again."

"Please God, no," I repeated as we retraced our steps down the cliff and along the winding path, Mistress Lucy gaining strength and color as we passed out of sight of the hideous platform.

It was necessary to go back along the path to the foot of the stairs. There were savannas here and there in the top of the wall. I suppose the fact that it was sheltered protected it. We passed along it for a mile and a half without much difficulty.

We feel it blow upon us, and it was also I could hear water babbling rocks in the distance. It was a damp in the cave, perhaps beca that. There was little light, boy save that cast by the lantern. I not see the farther wall.

Finally we landed at the foot of the hillock. As I had observed from the wall it was grass grown and tree clad. Indeed, we should have been hard put to it to have ascended it, so dense was the vegetation, had it not been for the fact that the path was continued around the hill constantly mounting. Where it ran the somewhat shallow earth had been cut away on the hillside and the rock surface laid bare. Of course this path was frightfully overgrown.

We ascended with the utmost care. I finally drew my little mistress, her face bedewed as well as my own, up the last step ascent and stood upon the crest.

We could now see why the top of the hill had seemed level when we first looked at it from the wall. Indeed, the coral rock rose in a sharp escarpment eight or ten feet above the highest treetops, making a sort of tableland or platform. This level, probably artificial, had been paved with the huge, dark gray rock of the stairs and statues and pathways. I may say in passing that in all our exploration of the island, which however, was not very thorough or complete owing to the shortness of our stay upon it, we saw no quarry whence this rock could have been taken, and the only way of accounting for its presence was that it had been brought there across the seas by the makers of the monuments and stairs, whoever they might have been. They must have had large seaworthy vessels and adequate means of land transportation, to say nothing of a most considerable engineering ability to accomplish these mighty works.

Well, the level top of the hillock was in shape a parallelogram, in extent perhaps an acre and a half. It was the most curious place I have ever seen. In the middle of it, with its four sides parallel to the sides of the plateau was a huge stone platform or altar perhaps 100 feet long by 70 feet wide. Completely surrounding this altar, but some distance away from it so as to make an aisle perhaps ten feet in width, rose a line of huge statues carry-that swept over the plateau and platform had probably assisted in keeping it clear of vegetation, of anything in fact, for save for a few scattered lines of grass it was as bare as the palm of my hand.

Well, we stood upon the platform and surveyed the scene in silent awe. Nothing in the parchment had led us to suspect all this, although I recollect the stone "Goddess" looking toward the niche with the big palm tree, the spot in the wall by which we were to locate the treasure cave.

"Come!" said I at last, breaking the silence. "We will have a nearer look at these gentry."

"It seems like the temple of a vanished race," breathed my lady softly, staring about her in growing wonder.

"Aye, and of a vanished God!" I said, extending my hand.

There was something weird and eerie about the plateau, and we felt better for the touch of each other's hand, at least I did. I always felt happier when I touched her little hand, but in this instance the feeling was somewhat different. In a certain sense it seemed like profanation for us to be there, yet we went on steadily, if slowly. We passed by the colonnade of statues around the inner platform and deliberately mounted the stairs.

Something, I know not what, made me bid my mistress pause before we reached the top, and I looked to my pistol and loosened my sword in its sheath as I did so, although why I did so and what I anticipated I cannot say. At any rate, I mounted to the top alone. There before me lay a platform which was sunk beneath me for a depth of two feet and which was surrounded by a low wall, on the top of which I stood. The three images rose from a smaller platform on a level with the top of this wall in the midst, and the whole place was filled with a horrible and frightful mass of human bones. Skulls, legs, thighs and smaller bones, heaped in terrible confusion, lay bleaching before me, and the space between them was filled with a fine dust, doubtless the dust of earlier bones which had mouldered away through centuries. Those that still preserved their shape were the top layer and were bleached perfectly white. They lay in all directions, as if they had been cast aside carelessly and at random, yet there were indications that there had been a path from where I stood to the platform of the three images, which I perceived was just about long enough to lay a human body on.

I stared apprehensively. I must confess, at this frightful charnel house of the centuries. The only evidences of humanity we had discovered were these frightful skeletons. I would have prevented it, but my mistress suddenly came and stood by my side. Then I thought she would have fainted as the full horror of the scene burst upon her.

"Men have been here," she faltered. "Horrible, cruel men."

"Yes," said I, "but centuries ago. Look, the bones are bleached white. You have naught to fear."

"Let us leave this frightful place," she said.

"Presently," I answered, "but you will remember the directions of the chart. I must stand upon that altar and get my bearings. The treasure cave should be in line with the statues and a nick or depression in the wall on the farther side."

must never come near here again."

"Please God, no," I repeated as we retraced our steps down the cliff and along the winding path, Mistress Lucy gaining strength and color as we passed out of sight of the hideous platform.

It was necessary to go back along the path to the foot of the stairs. There were savannas here and there in the way where we rested and a lovely brook of cool, delicious water, where we broke our fast, though it was not yet noon, but the openings all stopped before they reached the foot of the wall which was almost hidden in vegetation. I remembered the paths which had led off on either side from the stairs too. We followed one of them easily.

The wall to our left was dotted with openings to caves, but none of them seemed to fit the description we carried in our memories. The undergrowth deepened and grew denser as we progressed, and finally I had to open a way with my ax. The tangled masses soon gave way before my sturdy energy, and we entered a little clearing which extended to the wall. There above us were the three openings being greater than the others, the entrance high enough to admit me, who am much above the usual stature, without bending my head. It was elevated half way up the surface of the cliff and approach to it was by a pile of stones, not laid with the order and regularity of the giant stairs, but apparently piled together haphazard by people unskilled to make any other practical way of ascent.

It was difficult enough for us to climb as it was. The heap of stones evidently had not been mounted for years, and the stones had broken and fallen away in many places. Indeed I had to rebuild the pile here and there.

When after arduous labor I peered within the cave I could see nothing but the blackness. When we left the ship we had taken a lantern and a few candles. I had brought the lantern with me that day. We now lighted it with the flint and steel and tinder and stepped silently in. My lady followed me close, being, as she had said, unwilling to be left alone and ever ready to face any peril in my company.

Above the low entrance the cave wall rose to a height of perhaps twenty feet, making a vast vaulted chamber with gothic suggestions about it, for the coral before it hardened had been built into curious shapes and fantastic figures. We didn't notice this so much at first, for with a wild shriek, my gentle companion suddenly caught my arm and pointed downward.

The floor, like that of the central altar, was covered with human bones, a grawsome sight for any one and certainly for a woman, and made more grawsome because of the dull lighting of the cave. The bones were bleached white also and had evidently been there a long time. We could scarcely take a step without treading upon them. I had all I could do to keep my mistress from running back toward the mouth and thence to the ground, and it was not until I had reassured her that she would consent to go on.

As we had been compelled to pass on by our desire to get our bearings before, so if we were to get the treasure we would have to suffer this now. She summoned her courage and we went on.

As our eyes became accustomed to the light, for, indeed, the candle lan-

WE did not need to go into the cave, for there lay a number of large wooden boxes of moldy and ancient. The boxes once been iron strapped, but had rusted and the wood had found. I stepped over to one, lifted the lid, which crumbled touch, and there was the treasure: gold and silver! Thousands of pounds lay to our hands! The cancer had told the truth. The parchment was not a riddle, the plunder of the ancient galleon. For my part I would have exchanged it all for a star and a clear passage through life with a chance for freedom.

"Well, your great-great-great father, for how many generations I know not, was right," I said. "The treasure is here and you found it. It is yours."

"Yes," she said, to whom it thought had come, "but now have found it of what value is it?"

"None," I admitted, "that I could say. And what may be its value?"

"It would make good ballast for a ship," I answered lightly.

"But if we could take it to England!"

"Millions I can only guess."

"I will give you one-half of your share," she said, laughing.

"I want none of it," I returned solemnly.

What possessed her to do it, not, and she since confessed she did not either. We stood there, down upon the useless treasure she turned to me on a sudden.

"Now that you have seen it still of the same mind," she said.

"And with the treasure?"

"With the treasure, too; at least a sufficiency of it for all your needs."

"And when you have done this amazing thing for me you expect to disappear from my life, Master Hampdon?"

"Aye, if need be."

She laughed and I did not understand the meaning of that laugh either.

"Let us search and see if there be anything else. Your ancestor spoke of jewels," he said.

"Yes," she said, "there should be a smaller casket. Let us look further."

There were perhaps a dozen large boxes. I opened them all. Some were quite empty, with a little pile of dust in them and a few shreds of color here and there which indicated silk had been packed in them. There were also broken barrels around which still clung a faint odor of spices. There were piles of rotted debris further on, and as I stirred one of them with my sword I struck something more solid.
I brushed aside what seemed to be the decayed remains of cordage and canvas and finally came upon a smaller casket bound, hinged, and cornered with some kind of metal which I afterward found to be silver, for iron would have rusted away long since. The casket was about a foot long by six inches wide and six inches deep. The metal which completely covered it was curiously chased. The casket was locked. I crumbled the wood in my hands, but could not open the lock. The edge of my ax, however, proved a potent key, and at last forced it apart, and as I did so out fell a little heap of what I judged to be precious stones. There were green, red, blue and white ones, among them many pearls sadly discolored and valueless. The stones glis-tened with an almost living energy.
My mistress was more familiar with these things than I, and I presented a handful to her.

"Why, they are precious stones!" she cried in an awe struck whisper.
"Look!" She held up a diamond as big as her thumb nail. It sparkled like a sun in the candlelight. "And there is an emerald," she cried, picking up one of the green stones. "This blue one is a sapphire; this a ruby. Why," she exclaimed, "here is a fortune alone.
These jewels must be of fabulous value. The gold and silver we might

Thousands of dollars lay to our hands! The old butler had told the truth. The story parchment was not a romance; under of the ancient galleon was. For my part I would gladly exchange it all for a stout boat to clear passage through the reef, chance for freedom. Well, your great-great-grandfather, for how many generations back it was not, was right," I said at last. "The treasure is here and we have it. It is yours."

"I see," she said, to whom the same had come, "but now that we have found it of what value or use to me, I admitted, "that I can see."

What may be its value, think I would make good ballast for a ship," I answered lightly.

"If we could take it hence to the mainland," I said.

"I can only guess," she said, "I'll give you one-half of it for your share," she said, laughing softly. "I returned seriously enough."

"I possessed her to do it I know," she said, "since she confessed she knows the way. We stood there, looking upon the useless treasure, when suddenly she turned to me on a sudden."

"I see," she said, "that you would give up your portion of the treasure—for me?"

Why," she exclaimed, "here is a fortune alone. These jewels must be of fabulous value. The gold and silver we might leave behind, but these we can carry with us."

In my heart I was sorry we had found them, yet I had the grace immediately to say:

"I am glad for that. We must gather them up, but where shall we put them?"

"In the pockets of your coat for the present," she answered.

Now there were not so many of them—perhaps three or four handfuls—not nearly enough to fill the casket. I figured that it had been a jewel box with little trays or drawers and that the stones had been wrapped separately, but had all fallen together when the partitions rotted away. I easily found room for them in the capacious side pockets of my coat, and then we turned back to the outer room. Passing by the hideous altar, we gained the light. It was now late in the afternoon, we found to our surprise.

We had spent hours over the treasure and we had just time to retrace our steps and get back to the boat on the beach and partake of our evening meal when night fell. As we sat by the fire that night I made little bags out of a piece of canvas taken from a bread bag and we put the jewels into them, dividing them into equal parts. One bag she wore constantly thereafter on her person and I the other. She insisted that the rough and ready division we had made was permanent; that the bag I carried belonged to me and the bag she carried belonged to her. But I refused to have it so in spite of her argument, and there we left it.

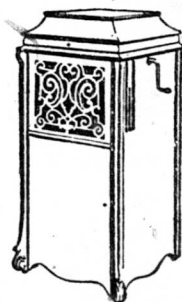

During the next two or three days we leisurely explored the island. There was nothing else on it to see which merits any particular description. We did not again visit the central hill, nor did we enter any other cave. We did not even go near the treasure cave again. On the contrary, we kept to the open. We chose to live near the sea on the beach, which was high above all tides and which was removed from the charnel spots which made a mockery of the sylvan groves within the walls. The island was well provided with tropical fruits, many being good for food, as I knew. We caught fish in the lagoon and turtle on the sand. We lacked nothing to make us comfortable, even happy, except the means of escape.

We spent our days in trying to devise some means of getting across the reef and back home again—that is, when I was not idly lying at the feet or following the footsteps of the woman I loved. I didn't want to get away, so far as I was concerned. I didn't care whether we ever got away. I had wit enough not to let her see, not to let her suspect that for a moment, however, and I tried to convince her by my conduct toward her that my kissing her on the ship had been but momentary madness, but I learned later that I failed lamentably. She says now that a baby could see that I was dying for her, and I suppose it is true, but at least I didn't say anything. After that outbreak in the cave I kept silence.

Late one afternoon we stood at the head of the stairs looking seaward. We had come from a long ramble throughout the cup of the island, and as we stood on the top our gaze as usual instinctively turned toward the sea, perhaps seeking for the sail of some rescuing ship. The water was black with great savage war canoes. "Great God," I cried; "look yonder!" "I see, I see!" she cried in turn. "Who can they be?"

"Dwellers from the other islands to the westward," I answered.

They could not see us yet, fortunately; but, after all, that mattered little. My little lady did not seem to be nearly as disturbed as I.

"The reef will protect us," she said at last, looking at me confidently.

"Not for a moment," I answered. "They will ride that reef in those light canoes more easily than we did."

"And you think"—she instantly began.

"Our lives are in God's hands. If I know anything these will be ferocious, bloodthirsty savages. See! They are armed."

I pointed to one tall brown man, who stood up in the bow of the nearest canoe, flourishing a broad bladed spear.

"We must hide," she said.

"But where? They will search the island."

"In the treasure cave," she answered.

And indeed that was the most likely spot. We had brought but little with us that afternoon. I had thrust a brace of pistols in my belt, and she herself, by my advice, always carried her two small ones, and I had my sword and ax, but everything else was in the boat on the beach. For a moment I thought of running down there and getting some of our things, but as I half turned to descend the stairs she detained me, divining my purpose.

"No, no!" she urged, clasping my arm with both hands. "We must make shift with what we have. Perhaps they may not discover us, and we can hide safely until they depart. Come! Let us go."

There was sense in her remarks. It might be that after performing their awful worship these most unwelcome visitors would return as they came, and by keeping closely hid we might escape an encounter with them. They would certainly find all our goods as soon as they crossed the reef and landed. But there was no help for that now. We had to make the best of a bad situation.

We turned and ran down the path across the wall. I had forethought to gather a number of coconuts and some other fruits as we passed. I filled my own pockets, and then she made a bag out of the skirt of her dress and carried the rest. Presently I reflected that we had no need for such haste. There would be plenty of time for us to reach the cave and conceal ourselves long before they landed, so we progressed more slowly. It was almost dusk when we reached our shelter. I uprooted a small tree just as we started to climb the pile of stones, which I used as a lever to push down the heap in every direction as we climbed, so that it would be impossible for any one else to enter the cave without piling up the stones again. We passed by the stone altar and its skeletons, crept into the inner room, flung ourselves panting upon the sand, and there we waited.

THE DAIRYMAN.

After the young cow has freshened the first time give her a little chance to rest before breeding again.

Do not keep the calves out cold nights. Start to put them in the barn, and coax them with a little grain feed. A calf well started is half grown.

Sour milk is about as good for growing a young calf as so much fog. Ice cold milk is but little better, and excessive quantities are even worse.

See that the cows are not chilled and their milk flow impaired. Remember that every time the cows shiver they shake out the profits.

The teats should always be observed by the milker and when they get hard and rough should be anointed with vaseline.

If the butter is slow in coming it is due to one of two causes. Either the cream is too cold or else the churn is overloaded, and the contents do not get proper oscillation.

DUPLICATING AN ACCIDENT.

Showing How It Happened Is Sometimes a Dangerous Risk.

"Showing just how an accident happened is sometimes serious business," said the adjuster of an accident insurance company. "The settlement of a claim isn't made any easier by having some reckless person insist on illustrating just how the thing occurred and then losing a hand, an arm or perhaps his life, before your very eyes."

"I shall never forget an elevator accident that occurred in the early days of my adjusting. The elevator was in an old building which had been remodelled for apartments and offices."

"A tenant rang the elevator bell on one of the upper floors. As there was no response to his signal, he put his head over the metal lattice work that enclosed the shaft to see if the elevator was up or down. Just then the elevator started, the heavy weights came down and crushed his skull."

"When I came to look the ground over the janitor insisted on showing me just how the man met his death. As an illustration he put his head out into the elevator shaft. Again the elevator started, the weights came down

ANCIENT MEDICINES.

Curious Drugs Were Used by the Doctors of Laodicea.

The city of Laodicea was noted for its doctors and its drugs. An especial and noted school of medicine flourished in Laodicea. We are told that "this school of physicians followed the teachings of Herophilus, who flourished about 300 years before Christ and who, on the principle that compound diseases require compound medicines, began that strange system of heterogeneous mixtures, some of which have only lately been expelled from our own pharmacopoeia."

The fearful and wonderful combination of drugs given by some modern doctors would seem to indicate that they still belong to this school of Laodicea. One of the medicines for which Laodicea was famous was an ointment for "strengthening the ears," whatever that may mean, while another medicine of still more interest to the student of revelation was the phrygian powder, made in part from a peculiar kind of stone pressed into tablets, afterward powdered and mixed with some unguent to be rubbed on the eye as a cure for the various diseases which afflict the optics in eastern countries. The world famous Galen speaks of both of these remedies in his pharmacopoeia.—Christian Herald.

KEEPING UP APPEARANCES.

Don't Let It Interfere With Your Savings Bank Account.

It is quite possible that the American family is too optimistic. It is always going to have a larger income next year or in five years. It desires to keep up in social matters with the people next door or farther up the street. It buys pianos or motorcars or encyclopedias on monthly payments, but in most cases puts no monthly installment in the savings bank. It has no margin of security.

How much better it is to have a margin of resources than to be living continually on the ragged edge of nothing, as many of us do just because we are such devotees of the god of appearances.

While the high cost of living is one of the five topics of the day, a note of warning should be sounded, a warning against extravagance, a suggestion that every family make a deposit in the savings bank each month. The future happiness and prosperity of the average American family depend

DRIED BEET PULP AS A DAIRY FEED

The feeding of a small herd of dairy cows without a silo from a limited amount of runout tillage land presents quite a problem—that is, if a profit is made, writes a New Hampshire farmer in the Rural New Yorker. While there is now no question about the value and economy of silage as a feed, it is nevertheless a fact that thousands of farmers are still without a silo. The best substitute we have found for silage is dried beet pulp, which we commenced feeding soon after it was put on the market.

Previous to using the pulp we fed the grains commonly considered best for dairy cows—viz, cornmeal, bran, cottonseed meal, gluten feed, hominy, etc.—in various combinations, depending on the cost of each and kind of roughage available. But we had more or less trouble from garget, caked udder, cows off feed, and they would generally shrink in milk much sooner than we thought they should. The beet pulp did not perhaps cause the cows to give a greatly increased flow of milk, but there were much less variation and shrinkage, and the troubles above mentioned disappeared. We have fed

The miserable specimen of a cow here pictured is typical of the many useless animals maintained in this country. Instead of being a source of profit such animals do not pay for their keep and are justly denominated "robber cows." Testing for milk production and butter fat is the best means of eliminating this unworthy type. The dairyman who keeps a herd of such scrubs is merely cumbering his fields and working for nothing.

the pulp both wet and dry and can see no particular difference in results. If fed dry cows should have access to water at least twice daily.

The rule we follow quite closely, but with some variation for amount of grain per cow, is one pound of grain for each three pounds of milk. The maximum grain feed is continued until milk flow is very small, when we reduce to from four to six pounds per cow and give that amount until within one week of her time to freshen. Each cow's grain is weighed, and we are exact about this to the ounce. By experimenting we found that to commence reducing the cow's grain ration as her milk flow diminished would cause her to shrink more rapidly, whereas if same amount was continued right along she would be encouraged to keep up as near as possible to her full flow of milk. We of course watch the cows closely and, if any unfavorable symptoms appear, imme-

While the high cost of living is one of the live topics of the day, a note of warning should be sounded—a warning against extravagance, a suggestion that every family make a deposit in the savings bank each month. The future happiness and prosperity of the average American family depend upon the proper adjustment of income and expenditure. It is not what a man earns, but what he and his family save, that counts in determining the ultimate success or failure of his life from a material standpoint.—T. D. MacGregor's "Talks on Thrift."

Early Hairpins.

The women of early days possessed bronze bodkins made like those of our time, and in their toilet they employed small tweezers of a pattern that has not altered in 2,000 years. To retain the hair in the desired fashion they had not, it is true, hit on the idea of bending a wire double, but they did employ for this purpose straight bronze pins exactly like the modern hatpin and showing a big spherical head.

mence reducing the cow's grain ration as her milk flow diminished would cause her to shrink more rapidly, whereas if same amount was continued right along she would be encouraged to keep up as near as possible to her full flow of milk. We of course watch the cows closely and, if any unfavorable symptoms appear, immediately reduce the ration, but this very rarely happens. By feeding in this way as the cow's milk flow diminishes she commences to put on more flesh, and the unborn calf also gets needed nourishment.

WORK THE STALLIONS.

Plentiful Exercise Conduces to Health and Vigor.

There is no stallion so good that he will not be a lot better if he is worked daily in the harness and made to take his turn in all the hard labor of the farm. What is there about a stallion that he should be condemned either to a life of luxurious ease or neglect more or less total? Few stallions kept for service in the country get proper care—indeed few of them get any sort of care at all during the winter season. Generally they are maintained on a starvation diet and allowed to grow hair several inches long, in which all manner of filth and vermin may collect at will. Stalls are seldom cleaned out, and as for cleaning up the exercising yard, that is never thought of.

Why should so many stallions be kept in this obnoxious way? Take any one of the farm horses and submit it to the same treatment and it would go wrong in a short time. Why then expect a stallion to withstand such ill treatment simply because he is a stallion? No matter what the horse cost, break him and put him to work. His giant thews and sinews, if he is a drafter, will be a tower of strength in the gang plow and the manure spreader. He will haul logs out of the timber with ease. If properly handled he is the pleasantest worker imaginable, because he is always unafraid and generally more intelligent than geldings or mares.

It is all in the man who handles the stallion. Then in addition to keeping the horse in a much more healthy condition continued labor in the harness will make and keep him docile and much more easily handled than if he is neglected and left to himself to form bad habits, mental and physical. There is a big dividend in working an entire horse, no matter what he cost.

Warts on the Udder.

Warts on the udder of a cow are readily removed by rubbing in best castor oil or fresh goose grease once or twice daily. Any wart that has a small neck may be removed at once by the use of the scissors; then lightly apply lunar caustic pencil.

A Lesson In Natural History.

An indulgent grandfather was entertaining his grandchildren by turning the leaves of a book on animals. Coming to the kangaroo, he called their attention to its peculiarities and especially to its enormous tail. Passing on, after awhile he thought he would try them to see how much they remembered of this talk about the kangaroo. He asked, "What animal has the biggest tail?" After a moment's thought one little girl spoke up, "I know, a snake; it's all tail."—Indianapolis News.

Alcohol and the Hair.

If the hair is dusty and unmanageable after a journey of any sort using alcohol to make it fluffy, alcohol will dry in a few moments the hair will be ready then range. Many women who have a railroad journey of several hours to a wedding or dance found their hair, owing to the dust and of the journey, quite and dirty and have despaired of it in shape in time for the ties. A shampoo takes too long; indulged in while one is dressing sometimes it leaves the hair to for immediate managing.

To get back to the alcohol treat part the hair and rub a little on a piece of gauze on the scalp it is free from dust. Then rub hair about the brows and ears a nap of the neck with the alcohol it should first have been washed as free as possible from dust. Let the hair hang loosely until the alcohol has dried out. The hair is light and fluffy.

How Good Roads will benefit You.

THEY BENEFIT THE FARMER, because they increase the value of his farm; enable him to raise more profitable crops; his cost of hauling will be low; he can reach markets when prices are best; his children can get to school every day in the year, and he will have more social life and better conditions generally.

THEY BENEFIT THE CONSUMER, because they reduce the cost of living in proportion to what the farmer saves, and by bringing new industries to the community, enable a larger proportionate amount to be paid out in wages, and with increased population, more amusements and better stores.

Public roads are commercial feeders of the city, and every improvement of these roads means a greater prosperity through increased agricultural production and greater stimulus to all industries.

Economical Good Roads

Concrete roads are best from the start and cheapest in the end. They are free from ruts, mud and dust. They give good footing to horses and easier traction to every class of vehicle, but most important is the fact that they require practically no expenditure for upkeep.

AN EXPERT ON HER FLIER.

When Old Boreas Brings the Snow Along All Children Are Happy—Curious and Interesting Tales—Games and Puzzles.

Nearly every healthy youngster shouts with glee when the north wind comes howling and growling, bringing with it a mighty fall of snow. Sleds that have lain idle for many months and the new ones that Santa Claus brought are quickly put to work, and the hills resound with merry shouts and chatter. The swift glide down a long hill is a glorious sensation, and climbing up to the top again for another whirl fills young lungs with fresh air and brings roses to round cheeks. Surely no other sport is quite so much fun as coasting. In large cities little folks don't have so free a fling as do those in the country, but they enjoy the snow just the same.

HEYDAY OF THE CAULIFLOWER

Novel Ways of Cooking This Delicious Vegetable.

While cauliflower belongs to the cabbage family, it is much more palatable and delicate and far more delicious than any cabbage. For many years cauliflower was a luxury, because it was not raised by gardeners generally, but the advance of information and the growth of the truck farming business have made it possible to produce cauliflower of excellent quality and at very low prices.

Here are some ways of cooking this delicious vegetable:

Cauliflower Fritters.—Cook one small cauliflower until almost tender. Then break off sprigs and dip in a batter made of three tablespoonfuls of flour, two tablespoonfuls breadcrumbs, one-half teaspoonful salt and about one-half cupful of milk, or enough to make a frying batter. Fry the fritters in deep fat until a nice brown. Serve at once.

Cauliflower au Gratin.—Separate the boiled cauliflower into small flowerets. Place them in a buttered pudding dish in alternate layers with white sauce and grated cheese. Cover the top with breadcrumbs and bake until the sauce bubbles through the crumbs.

Creamed Cauliflower.—Remove the leaves, cut off the stalk and soak thirty minutes (head down) in cold water to cover. Cook (head up) twenty minutes or until soft in boiling salted water. Drain, separate in flowerets and reheat in one and a half cupfuls of white sauce.

Cauliflower au Parmesan.—Place a whole cooked cauliflower on a dish for serving. Sprinkle with grated cheese, then cover with buttered breadcrumbs and place on an oven grate to brown crumbs. Remove from oven and pour a cupful of white sauce around cauliflower.

Cozy Sleeping Porch For Children.

If you have a porch on your sleeping floor, why not fix it up this winter as an open air bedroom for the small members of the family? Have awnings which can be drawn flatly down at the sides in case of a bad storm. It is important, of course, that the children have plenty of warm bedclothes. It is wise to have them sleep between blankets and to wear thick pajamas. Cotton sleeping socks can also be bought at the department stores.

This plan of sleeping has been adopted by many wise parents in the last ten years, though there are a great many others who are "afraid" of the results from such an arrangement. This is all a mistaken notion, as a child who has been allowed since infancy to sleep out of doors is far healthier than the boy or girl who is accustomed to be coddled by his mother and made to sleep in a heated room with perhaps the window pulled down but a few inches from the top.

"I really believe that I owe my life to 'Fruit-a-tives'. Ever since childhood, I have been under the care of physicians and have been paying doctors' bills. I was so sick and worn out that people on the street often asked me if I thought I could get along without help. The same old stomach trouble and distressing headaches nearly drove me wild. Some time ago I got a box of 'Fruit-a-tives' and the first box did me good. My husband was delighted and advised a continuation of their use. 'Fruit-a-tives' completely cured me. Today, I am feeling fine, and a physician meeting me on the street, noticed my improved appearance and asked me the reason. I replied, 'I am taking Fruit-a-tives'. He said, 'Well, if 'Fruit-a-tives' are making you look so well, go ahead and take them. They are doing more for you than I can'.

CHOOSING THE EASIEST WAY.

The Mail Man Who Risked His Life Rather Than Write a Letter.

"THERE is a conviction throughout the country," says a postoffice department official, "that the departmental business at Washington is more or less hampered by red tape. This conviction is held by many minor employees of the government in out of the way places, as is evidenced by a story that came to me from New England.

"It appears that there was a postman whose duty it was to deliver mail to the few scattered houses on an island off the Atlantic coast. One day during a heavy storm this carrier was seen rowing his boat over. So severe was the storm that several times it seemed that the man would certainly be swamped. Finally, however, he succeeded in reaching his destination.

"What the deuce made you run such risks?" demanded a friend when the postman eventually grounded on the beach.

"It's this way," was the reply. "If I miss a trip it is necessary to write an awfully long report to Washington explaining why. So I thought I'd rather row over!"—New York Times.

Pie.—Select large cranberries and cut each one in half with a sharp knife. For one pie you will need a cupful and a half of berries, with them a tablespoonful of oil, one cupful of sugar and one cupful of butter. Line a pie pan with plain pastry, fill with the berries, then cover with strips of pastry laid on crisscross, latticework and bake slowly until the berries are brown. If preferred, the berries can be stewed first before being put into the crust.

Alcohol and the Hair.

When the hair is dusty and unmanageable after a journey of any sort try alcohol to make it fluffy. The alcohol will dry in a few moments, and the hair will be ready then to arrange. Many women who have taken a long journey of several hours' duration to a wedding or dance have found their hair, owing to the heat and dust of the journey, quite heavy and dirty and have despaired of getting it in shape in time for the festivities. A shampoo takes too long to be used in while one is dressing, and sometimes it leaves the hair too fluffy for immediate managing.

Get back to the alcohol treatment, then, and rub a little alcohol on the hair and rub a little alcohol on the piece of gauze on the scalp until free from dust. Then rub the hair about the brows and ears and the back of the neck with the alcohol. Of course it should first have been brushed free as possible from dust. Then the hair hangs loosely until the alcohol has dried out. The hair will be clean and fluffy.

Serve in French dressing. The idea of filling the ring is to give it the effect of a basket. It is more convenient to serve on separate or individual plates.

Every child must have twenty-six counters—one for every letter in the alphabet. Each player has to find a different adjective to describe "grandmother's cat" all through the alphabet. For example, A begins, "Grandmother's cat is an aristocratic or antiquated cat." B—Grandmother's cat is a beautiful or benevolent cat. C—Grandmother's cat is a cautious cat or cataleptic cat. And so on through the alphabet.

Each letter must go the round of the table, and no one must repeat an adjective used before. If he or she does so one counter must be given up, and when a player's counters are exhausted he is out of the game. A counter is forfeited also if the word used is not an adjective or if the player fails to think of a word within a given time.

A Happy Moment.

When grandma says to me, "Stand up against the wall," I know she's going to see how many feet I'm tall. She measures up and down while I stand very straight. And, with a smiley frown, she tries to calculate.

She says: "H'm! Let me see—He's four years old." And then she whispers, "Forty-three." Or is it "Three feet ten?" I scarcely breathe at all till she says, measuring more, "This boy is just as tall as his father was at four!"

Safety in Window Cleaning.

It is no longer necessary to endanger one's life or risk one's nervous system by sitting on a window sill to clean windows. A window cleaner is manufactured that is wonderfully simple and efficient. It consists of a chamois finished cloth on an oblong holder, to which is attached a curved handle that, opening and closing on the principle of a pair of scissors, will manipulate and control the cleaner so that the outside of windowpanes can be cleaned and polished from within the house. The price of this life preserving, nerve saving invention is $3.

A Culinary Hint.

Most people use a tablespoon for mixing batter for Yorkshire puddings or pancakes, etc. If an ordinary kitchen fork is used instead of the spoon it will be found that the lumps can be smoothed in half the time. Also a fork used for beating the batter allows of the air getting in, which helps to make the batter light.

And the cyclist understood.—London Tit-Bits.

She Was Out of It.

After preaching a sermon on the fate of the wicked an English clergyman met an old woman well known for her gossiping propensities, and he said:

"I hope my sermon has borne fruit. You heard about the place where I said there shall be wailing and gnashing of teeth?"

"Well, as to that," answered the dame, "if I 'as anything to say it be this—let them gnash teeth as 'as 'em. I ain't."—Boston Post.

OBITUARY.

A gloom was cast over the vicinity when the sad news of the death of Mr. Jas. Hanlan was learned. His death came as a great shock to his family, as he had been ailing about four weeks and his case was not thought to be at all serious. All that loving hands and medical aid could do was done but he passed peacefully away on Wednesday Jan. 28th. The late Mr. Hanlan was born in Adolphustown in the year 1852 and resided there until four years previous to his death, when he settled in South Fredericksburgh. Deceased was possessed with a gracious kindly disposition and was always ready and willing to lend a helping hand to everyone. For many years he served in Municipal affairs, acting as Reeve and councillor. He was a Liberal in politics. He leaves to mourn his loss a widow, two daughters and one son, Mrs. Snider, Wilton, and Edward and Minnie at home. One sister and four brothers, John, Mike, and Peter of Winnipeg, Man., Patrick of Clayton, N. Y., and Mrs. Alfred Docteur, of St. Lawrence, N. Y.. He was a faithful husband and a kind affectionate father and will be greatly missed in his home and social circles, where he was liked by all. The funeral took place on Saturday at 10 a.m., from his late residence to St. Patrick's church, Napanee, of which deceased was a faithful member. Service was conducted by Rev. Father O'Connor. The remains were placed in the R. C. vault to await interment. A requiem mass was sung on Wednesday morning for the repose of the soul. The pall-bearers were, Messrs. J. B. Allison, W. D. Roblin, Thos Chalmers, Bruce Russell, Harry Chalmers and Jas. McCarten. The family have the sympathy of their large circle of friends in their sad bereavement.

Mastiff Takes a Cab.

M. Clemenceau, the French statesman, owns a large and fierce mastiff whose habit it is from time to time to make long excursions into outlying parts of Paris. When he is tired the dog will jump into a horse cab, and sit there growling and showing his teeth if the cabman attempts to remove him. Seeing the name and address of M. Clemenceau engraved on the dog's brass collar, the cabman finally drives the dog home. In this way M. Clemenceau has had several long fares to pay.

TAMARACK COMMERCIALY EXTINCT.

Insect Threatens Tree's Extermination.

"The large larch sawfly," says the Dominion Entomologist, "has destroyed between fifty and one hundred per cent of the native larch, or tamarack." Every farmer in Eastern Canada has observed this mysterious killing off of the tamarack in the low-lying portions of his woodlot. Mr. J.
B. Tyrrell, who recently explored the new District of Patricia for the Ontario Government, reports on the large numbers of the tamarack in that region, but says, "Unfortunately most of the trees are dead." Through the continued attacks of a single forest pest, whose ravages it is now impossible to control, one of the most valuable timber trees of Eastern Canada is now in danger of extinction.

In British Columbia, forest insects have destroyed in some places over twenty-five per cent of the timber-crop. Technical foresters in the employ of the Dominion Forestry Branch have noted similar depredations, when conducting forest surveys in the Northwest. Similar conditions prevail in the United States, where on some of the National Forests the damage done by insects last summer far exceeded that done by fire. H. S.
Graves, Chief Forester of the United States, says: "A few isolated trees attacked by insects may form the nucleus of a devastation quite as serious as that from forest fire."

It is very likely that in Canada as much damage is done to the standing timber by forest pests as by forest fires. Fortunately the former are largely dependent for their existence on the latter, for fire furnishes the chief feeding and breeding grounds to the insect foes of the forest. Thus the Dominion Forestry Branch, by reducing the fire-burnt area on Dominion forest reserves last summer to less than two one-hundredths of and per cent (0.02%) has succeeded in "killing two birds with the one stone." One of the foresters, describing how this is accomplished, says:—"Fire minimizes the vitality of the tree and climate take advantage of the weakness, thereby creating a condition favorable to insects and fungi. By minimizing the damage done by fire and handling the various stands according to one of the silvicultural systems suitable to that type the result can only be strong, vigorous trees better equipped to withstand all natural enemies."

Hair combings made into switches,
